Did you know?

Students who regularly attend tutoring:
- get better grades than those who do not
- are less likely to withdraw from classes
- are less likely to drop out of school
- become better team members and communicators
- exercise more control over their academic careers
- develop higher-order thinking skills
- feel better about their abilities

Students develop cognitive and metacognitive (learning how to learn) abilities when they explain their thoughts to group members. Explaining how they’ve arrived at an answer or reached a conclusion involves analysis of their thought processes.

Tutors at MATC:
- are themselves students or recent graduates with great study habits
- possess skills that make them stand out in their areas of study
- have undergone internationally recognized training

MATC tutors work toward certification through the College Reading and Learning Association. There are three levels of certification ~ Regular, Advanced, and Master. Each level requires at least 10 hours of training and 25 hours of tutoring experience.
